

Harbor College Appoints Deans to School Staff

Appointment of J. Reyburn Hatfield as dean of special services and Glenn G. Gooder as dean of student activities was announced today by Wendell C. Black, president of Harbor College.

Hatfield, dean of student activities at Harbor since the institution opened in 1949, moving to the position made available by the recent retirement of Hazel M. Whedon. Hatfield received his M.A. from USC and has been a teacher or administrator in the Los Angeles City Schools for 23 years.

In addition to his administrative duties, Hatfield has been active in civic events as a member of the board of directors of the Wilmington Kiwanis Club and a member of the planning committee for the Wilmington Centennial.

Gooder comes to Harbor College as dean of student activities from Los Angeles City College, where he was assistant dean of instruction since 1958 and chairman of the speech department in 1957. Prior to joining the City College staff, he was assistant professor of speech at Pepperdine College. He received his A.B. degree from instruction at Harbor College, Fresno, his M.A. and Ph.D. of a textbook, "Improving Your Speech," published this year by Harcourt-Brace and Dr. John Grasham, dean of Company.

Specialist Schneider is a weapons section chief in the artillery's Battery A in Giessen. He entered the army in February, 1959, completing basic-combat training at Fort Ord.

Missile Project Loss Leaves Firm Unhurt

"Cancellation of the Corvus missile project by the U.S. Navy will not significantly affect work backlogs of Horkey-Moore Associates," E. J. Horkey, president of the Torrance engineering firm announced today.

Under contract from Temco Electronics and Missiles Company, the prime contractor for the rocket-powered air-to-surface guided missile, Horkey-Moore designed, manufactured and tested the launching mechanism which forcibly separated the Corvus from its pylon.

The Horkey-Moore pylon-mounted ballistic force ejection equipment was used on the first successful air launch of the missile from a Douglas A4D Skyhawk.

According to Horkey, the development phase of the work has been completed. Only the testing under Temco direction will be affected by the cancellation.

The local firm is engaged in design and development, manufacture and testing of a wide variety of aircraft and missile component systems and sub-systems.
